“Letters to the Editor”:

“Let’s Stop”: ASUU chairman of foreign student activities, Ralph Thomson is writing to the editor to ask to end controversy among his work affairs. A Mr. Lothrop accuses him of ignoring and postponing discussions of housing problems. Thomson extends an invitation to join him in a discussion for issues in the foreign student community.

“Suppressed”: Steve Beck writes about how pieces of a student art exhibit were removed under authoritative demand. Beck implies that it is an infringement on academic and artistic freedom. When questioned authorities then questioned the rights of the artists to display to the public eye. Authorities had deemed the artwork offensive. Beck goes on to say that this incident has happened more than once, and in the eyes of the authority they have assumed the position of necessary censorship.

“The Model T”: I have read this article multiple times and I still can’t figure out what it’s about. It starts by discussing the long hours the ASUU Second Vice President has been putting in. He was counting the people going in and out. It then changes lanes as talks about the University of New Mexico and how police can’t solve the crime of the missing inventory of a human skeleton. After that It again switches lanes to reveal a professor had received an eerie letter. “There is no Easter Bunny, Santa Clause ate it for Thanksgiving.” The London Observer then reports on Oxford’s school magazine. Ending with how this is the last article until the beginning of spring quarter. To make it even more confusing the name of the article is “Model T”.

“A Common Goal”: Once again this article is focused on the foreign student program. Specifically, their president Bob Clark. A meeting between the Cosmopolitan Club and the Foreign Students Program sparked debate against the president. Cosmopolitan members claimed that Clark had fired capable staff, and used the program for political gain, and not having the best interests of the students in the club. It has been shown that the sooner the both sides back down the fast the issue will be resolved.

“Trying Souls”: The Last Chronicle of the Winter quarter. It discusses the hard times of finals week. 5000 word term papers, tests and cramming information into your brain just to word vomit it up the next day.
